Hi colleagues,

As you may have seen in the clips this morning, there is an article regarding Nick Johnston.

I wanted to assure you that Nick comes to my office as Director of Communications and Strategy not on account of party or partisan involvement, but precisely because he offers the standing, wealth of experience and knowledge that will help us reach audiences we need to win back in 2026. His primary role is to provide us all with strategic communications guidance and plans that we can execute right across Victoria. Nick's abilities will ensure that we can promote the messages and values our team wants to champion throughout constituencies we need to attract.

In all my discussions with Nick, he has been upfront about working with governments of different persuasions across the country during his career. His experience has meant that he has been approached for roles by both sides of politics over the years. Like other media professionals who need to make a living, he has applied for roles too. As a communications professional, Nick has worked in newsrooms, sports organisations, industry bodies and peak business groups. He has vast networks and some of you would have had dealings with him covering state politics over a number of years.

For Labor to release Nick's personal private details to the media should be a concern for all journalists, communications professionals and other Victorians who may wish to move into a political or public sector role simply to earn a livelihood from their media skills and qualifications. It was unethical, but that is what they do. Labor will attack any Victorian, any journalist or any professional who doesn't agree with them. We don't.

We have only one goal: to win government in 2026. I have no doubt that Nick is fully invested in that objective.

Warm regards,

JP

Absolutely. I got sent this tonight by a former Andrews govt staffer FWIW:

"Disgraceful from a Premier of Victoria. Redlich has done more for the community through decades of public service and has more integrity in his little toenail than DA ever will!"
