PTC in Canberra went well. Looks great.

Also got some more shots at night in and outside APH, more of general drinks and bars (doesn't all need to be at The Dock cause they got a cab after leaving a second unnamed venue).

Thanks Lisa,

I see Angus has made the changes and he did request yesterday that we make sure that all of your reaction shots are suitable, so will be changing a few of those.

I'm hoping the next WIP you see will be MUCH closer to the final product ... especially with suitable overlay.

Thanks,
Darryl

So happy with the new edit guys. As Pete said, so wonderfully sensitive.

Thanks so much for making those changes too.

Just a couple of small things... (I know, I'm being a pain, but hey, fresh eyes.)

*The fact that at no time was permission was sought from Brittany for Linda Reynolds (or anyone for that matter), to inform Michaelia Cash of deeply private information about her having been raped is really significant. That has nothing to do with her employment. This is further proof that the mechanisms of Parliament House had taken control of Brittany's story. Almost everyone had more information about what had happened to Brittany than Brittany herself - something that clearly added to the trauma she had to endure. Or as Cash put it, "suck it up or leave".

For that reason could we amend the fact that no permission was sought from Brittany in the VO please?

*Also, given how traumatised poor Brittany is, is there any chance we could drop at least one of the moments where I asked her if she is OK? Maybe when she is crying and blows her nose?

Otherwise, I do come across as pretty businesslike...particularly as a woman listening to another woman's deeply traumatic story.

Thanks so much guys. Canberra, here we come...

Lisa.

Really great edit guys....just two things I would say, the fact that Finklestein checked in the day of the Four Corners Canberra Bubble story is really significant, as opposed to him randomly just checking in to see if she is OK - at the moment its framed to look like his checking in is some sort of caring gesture, which according to my conversations with Brittany was definitely not the case. The timing of that call was crucial. At the moment we are totally letting him off the hook. This also drives home the proximity to the PMO, and the fact that it's not just the rape itself that is horrifying, it's the systemic coverup.

Secondly, I asked Brittany on camera why she was speaking out now, and her answer was absolutely magnificent. A lot of viewers will wonder her motivations a whole two years after the fact, so is there any chance we can squeeze that in please? I think it will help shield Brittany once the story airs from accusations that her motivation is anything other than noble.

Cheers, and thanks,

Lisa.
