4Cs Canberra Bubble story November 2020

LOUISE MILLIGAN, REPORTER: The Liberal Party has been grappling with what's been described as a "women problem" for several years, with accusations of endemic sexism.

LINDA REYNOLDS, LIBERAL SENATOR, 23 AUGUST 2018: "I do not recognise my party at the moment. I do not recognise the values. I do not recognise the bullying and intimidation that has gone on."

JULIE BISHOP, DEPUTY LIBERAL LEADER, 2007-2018, 5 SEPTEMBER 2018: "It's evident that there is an acceptance of a level of behaviour in Canberra that would not be tolerated in any other workplace."

This is from Hansard - LR talking just as the leadership spill had been called on Turnbull.

I say to everybody in this place and to anybody who may be listening: I do not recognise my party at the moment. I do not recognise the values. I do not recognise the bullying and intimidation that has gone on. I hope that, whatever happens after midday tomorrow, we can find a way to get back together again, because it is not just the leader, the Prime Minister, but all of us in the team who have been such a successful government. We have delivered for this country and up until now we have been a united and very effective party.
