Thanks. I've got the original and your versions both. I'll go through them with the lawyers today. The questions are really to cover us off for defamation. Anything we're accusing these people of specifically which could lower their reputation in the broadcast we covering off in these questions.

But we're still asking for an interview which is where we would ask the other questions. It's going to be very tricky to get any kind of response from them on the specifics - where as the broader questions of perceived insensitivity and questions we're sure of the answers to (like was an ambo called) would be the ones we'd be forcing them to answer only in an interview.
